Preaching Today

Dane Kerr is filling the pulpit this morning. Dane is an elder here at North Street and loves to lead others in an understanding of the text. Dane gets that all the authority in a message comes from scripture. He dives deep into texts and studies topics well. He is a blessing to North Street. Dane teaches a men's study on Monday evenings here at the church. All men are welcome and encouraged to attend.

Taste Buds of One's Heart!

Psalm 119:103 - "How sweet are your words to my taste, sweeter than honey to my mouth!" I love this verse and the call to desire scripture. I have a friend who has his own bees. This friend occasionally blessed me with some local, fresh honey. When I receive a fresh jar, I usually can't help but to put a spoon in and just enjoy the taste. This is how we as Christians should desire the word of God. Believers are born-again people. Christians have been made new, including new taste buds that long for the words of God. Obviously, I'm not talking about literal taste buds, but the taste buds of one's heart. The Word of God in the heart of a believer is far more desirable than honey on the lips. This same desire is talked about in Psalm one. Blessed is the man that delights in the law of the Lord. One of the amazing promises of scripture is that the very book you're delighting in can transform you from a dry piece of firewood to a blossoming orchard. It transforms thinking, which transforms action. Who wouldn't want to read that book? Love the word of God. Desire it, become fruitful, and honor God.
